Another paradox is that only by remaining a slave to art may one become its master.

Dumb Dora thinks it wonderful that the world is tired of her, and she is only a day.

Psychological note: If he carries his small change in a purse he is probably a tight-wad.

It is written that the moon shall inherit the earth, and that's the only way they'll ever get it.

Marrying a girl who is beautiful but dumb would be all right if she should only stay that way.

After we teach people respect for laws we may hope to persuade them to have respect for Indians.

A Georgia woman declares that her refrigerator has been into her refrigerator lately, not counting the ice man.

A Congressman declares that the time is ripe for a settlement of the Muscle Shoals question. Not only ripe, but rotten.

A Minnesota professor made himself solid with the younger generation by declaring that the only way to be a child is to be a child.

Masochist says he reviews his mistakes of the day every night before going to bed.

It is hinted that the crime commission will soon make an exhaustive report. It will no doubt be exhaustive to those who are obliged to read it.

A Nebraska man will remain a bachelor, he says, because his sweetheart will not marry him when he is drunk and he will not marry her when he is sober.

UTILITIES GIVE AID
Whatever one may think of public utility methods generally, it cannot be denied that during the depression of recent months the utilities have done much toward preventing a worse unemployment situation than has been experienced.

The Business World, a leading business periodical, declares that "more than railroad or any other major group, utilities have proved themselves the real stabilizing force in a bad year."

It is said that a billion dollars of new capital has gone into utility expansion this year. It is said that "these great modern enterprises have helped to steady business."

It is well for the country that, in spite of all the demagogic attacks on them of late, the utilities have maintained their courage and faith in America, and have been able to look that way and not forward at a time when more timid enterprises stood still or did a backward.

PAPERS REFLECT TOWN
It is recognized that a town may be rather accurately judged so far as its progressiveness is concerned, by the way in which it supports its newspapers. In other words, a creditable and progressive looking newspaper may be safely taken as an indication of a live and enterprising community.

The reason is plain. A live town naturally demands a live newspaper or newspapers, and there will always be found some one to meet the demand. Almost without exception it may be found that a town has just about as good a newspaper as it deserves.

INDUSTRY SPREADS OUT
Instead of further concentration in the larger cities, the present tendency of industrial plants is toward the smaller towns, according to a recent study by an enterprising community.

Some of the reasons for this decentralization of industry are given in the following: Almost without exception it may be found that a town has just about as good a newspaper as it deserves.

It is difficult to imagine the sensations experienced by persons from isolated sections of the world, particularly in the case of the "California Fig Syrup" and it never fails to excite a keen interest in the writer.

A dispatch tells of the wonder child, which reached the city of Elba, Ala., on the 17th inst. A year-old girl from the Island of St. Kitts, off the English coast, first saw a horse in a picture on a train and a moving picture on her first visit to the mainland.

Thousands of people live and die without seeing any of these things, although they live with a comparatively short distance of them.

Story of Alabama Told in Holland's

In a well illustrated article T. C. Richardson, staff writer of Holland's The Magazine of the South, tells nearly half a million Southern subscribers to this magazine an interesting story of the building of the state, development and resources of Alabama. This is one of a series of articles about the Southern states, appearing in Holland's The Magazine of the South, written by Mr. Richardson, for the purpose of giving Southern people a better understanding of their own and neighboring states. A different state is discussed each month, and in the light of the history of the state, the progress of the state is given. The article that appears in the current issue is in reference to Alabama. Mr. Richardson writes:

"Today Alabama stands out among her sisters as one of the most broadly developed and progressive states, and the number of things in which she stands first is impressive. Her natural advantages are just beginning to be developed. Her mineral resources without number. Her agricultural resources are being developed. The spirit of Alabama as a territory, and in her progress as a state, is not to be denied. It is during the four years of civil war in which Alabama took a great part, not was that spirit destroyed by the political and financial disabilities of that war."

SOME PURITAN CUT-UPS

Those who depend on the rural historical works of the school book no doubt have formed the impression that the Puritans (and forefathers) of New England were about as perfect as folks could be. The iconoclasts have been at work again, however, and have dug up some old records which appear to show that human nature was about the same in the Puritan era as it is at present. A recent writer quotes at length from a Massachusetts court docket of 1646, in which a few simple cases are given as follows:

TIME TABLE OF 1830

The first railroad time table published in the South, issued at Charleston in 1830, announcing the schedule for a short line out of that city, contained provision which would appear amusing to present-day travelers. It gave the information that arrangements for special trips could be made by agreement with the engineer. "Best Friend of Charleston," the first locomotive built in America, and which only about four tons, was put in regular service on Christmas day of the same year. The first time table, which has been preserved, contained the following information:

"The Public are respectfully informed that the Railroad Company has purchased from Mr. Miller his Locomotive Steam Engine and that it will hereafter be constantly employed in the transportation of passengers."

"The times of leaving the station in Line street will be 8 o'clock, at 10 a. m., at 1 and half past 3 o'clock p. m." in accession, and maintaining the cultural ideas of her pioneers she has nevertheless let no grass grow where material opportunities are to be had. Her civic consciousness is interpreted into action by her the untalented, national leadership in the realm of public health; one of her best and well worked into the soil before planting the seed."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Willingness to cooperate with Government agencies and with civic groups interested in the beauty of the Nation's highways, to do away with the "evils of present-day outdoor advertising," has been expressed by spokesmen of leading outdoor advertisers.

Most soft drinks are artificially colored with so-called certified dyes, harmless, and suitable for use in beverages and other foods, says J. W. Sale of the Federal Food and Drug Administration. The ordinary 7-ounce bottle of artificially colored soda contains only about three-hundredths of a grain of added coloring matter.

The net returns from purebred and grade Aberdeen-Angus calves are about $100 per head, says a report from the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn. The Winter Flowering Spencers may be planted later, but do best if planted earlier, he said.

He recommended dropping the seed about two inches apart in a trench and covering them about four inches deep. Sweet peas grow best in the heavier soils which have plenty of organic matter. A liberal application of manure or about one pound of fertilizer per square yard is recommended.

"The manure should be thoroughly rotted and well worked into the soil before planting the seed," he said. "After planting it is best to cover the ground with a mulch of leaf mold and well rotted manure for the winter. This should be about three inches deep and of light friable material and should not be packed. It should be removed as soon as the plants come through the ground."

The plants should be thinned to four inches apart when they are about two inches tall and should receive plenty of water. Poultry netting or brush will make a good trench, he said.
